

ILM Level 3 Award in First Line Management

Overview

The course consists of five modules covering key management areas. To achieve the certificate, candidates must attend all sessions and, in addition, complete a course assignment which is assessed externally.

Who is it for?

The course is suited to managers and supervisors who wish to build on their experience and work towards gaining a nationally accredited qualification in leadership and management.

Outcomes

At the end of the workshop participants will:

- have acquired relevant knowledge in five key management areas
- be able to relate the training to their own organisation and their role within it
- have acquired the relevant tools and techniques to become more effective and confident managers
- have achieved a nationally accredited management qualification (subject to assessment)
- will be given advice and guidance on the next steps in management training

Format

The course is delivered over 36 hours, including tutorial time. The format of delivery can be tailored to suit your needs but is often run over 6 full-day sessions.
